The Valparaiso's Mails.

London, April 8th.

In the House of Lords, yesterday, Lord Kimberley stated, in reply to Lord Brabourne, that instructions had been given to the Commissioners on the Transvaal to make every effort to punish the murderers of Captain Elliot and Mr. Barber, and also other persons who might have been guilty of any similar acts.

Their Lordships afterwards went into Committee on the Army Discipline Bill, which was also read a third time and passed.

Lord Kimberley stated, in answer to Lord Bury, that instructions had been given to the Transvaal Commissioners to make full provision for the protection of the rights and property of all, whether British or Dutch, who had been loyal to the Queen during the troubles.

In an immensely crowded House of Commons, Mr. Gladstone rose, amid enthusiastic cheers, to move for leave to bring in a Bill to further amend the law relating to the occupation and ownership of land in Ireland. After expressing the relief which he felt in leaving the dreary course of penal legislation for the more genial and agreeable task of remedial measures, he admitted that the defects of the Land Act of 1870 had marred the beneficial operation of that measure, and that there was an imperative necessity for effecting an extensive reformation of the Irish Land Laws. In dealing with the most difficult and complex question, he had, of course, to look for guidance somewhere, and now the House was in possession of the results of two Royal Commissions, one the Richmond and the other the Bessborough Commission. From these two bodies they had expected two Reports, but in place of a whole litter, and from them he had derived much valuable information. It was noteworthy, too, that though they differed on many points, they both agreed on one vital point, which was the constitution of a court which was to deal with differences between landlord and tenant with regard to rent, and that there should be legislative interference to protect the tenant from arbitrary eviction. The subject was divisible into three branches, one of which was what was commonly known as the Land Law which had to do with the sale, transfer, and devolution of land, but he should hardly touch upon that in the present measure, because it could not be combined with the other great and complex subjects that he had to treat of. The other two branches were—first, the relations of landlord and tenant in Ireland; and, secondly, the group of provisions which required advances from the public Exchequer. With respect to tenant-right, under the Act of 1870 a scale of compensation for disturbance was enacted, and since the passing of that act tenant-right had become something sensible and considerable, and both Commissions had recognised it. His Bill would, therefore, recognize the mutual right of tenant and landlord, and the former would have power to assign his interest with a due regard to the rights of the latter. The cardinal principle of the measure was the creation of a Land Court, to which it should be optional with the tenant to apply and ask for a fixed judicial rent upon the basis of a fair rent. When the judicial rent had been fixed, it would carry with it a statutory term of fifteen years, during which there would be no change, and no eviction, unless it were for a breach of certain specified covenants or non-payment of rent. The tenant would be entitled to sell his right, and at the end of the statutory term of fifteen years might apply to the Court for its renewal. But after the second period of fifteen years the landlord might resume possession upon certain conditions. When the tenant wished to sell his tenant-right, the landlord might apply to the Court and purchase it. With regard to the Ulster Custom, the tenant under that custom might have the protection of the general provisions of the Bill for controlling augmentations of rent; but if he chose to leave the custom and fall back upon the general provisions of the Bill, he might apply to the Court. He might also where he held a lease, claim compensation under the Act when the lease expired; and power would be given to contract out of the provisions of the Act in cases where the value amounted to one hundred and fifty pounds and upwards. Describing the constitution of the new Court, the right hon. gentleman said it would consist of three persons, one of whom would always be a judge or ex-judge of a superior Court. Its proper seat would be in Dublin, and it would be empowered to appoint Assistant Commissioners where and Sub-Commissioners where required, to sit elsewhere and conduct their proceedings under the superintendence of the Central Court. Coming to the question of advances from the public Exchequer Mr. Gladstone explained that it was not intended to change the purposes to which they were to be applied. The tenant would be assisted with money for the purchase of his holding where the landlord was willing to sell. The Court would be a Commission authorised to purchase estates where a proportion of the tenants, three-fourths in number and value, were ready to repurchase, and to advance three-fourths of the whole price, the tenant being allowed to borrow the remaining fourth. Whilst subject to mortgage the holdings would neither be sublet nor subdivided, and the tenant's title would be guaranteed. It was intended likewise to authorise advances to solvent Companies for the purchase of land, the condition being that the advances should not be greater than the sum which the Companies might themselves have raised. Advances would also be made either to Colonial Governments or to Companies for promoting emigration, but he did not propose any limit to those prudent rules which usually guided Parliament. In concluding his speech, the right hon. gentleman assured the House that, in proposing the measure, the Government were animated solely by the principle of justice, which, though obstacles might retard it, would finally be sure to triumph.

Sir S. Northcote hoped it would be the opinion of the House that it was due to the importance of the subject that they should for the present postpone any discussion of the principles involved in the Prime Minister's proposals.

Mr. Parnell remarked that he would not refer to the principle of the Bill further than to say that he would rather see provision made for migration than for emigration, because there was an abundance of good land in Ireland where there was no population.

Mr. Forster, in reply to questions, said the Government had no desire whatever to stimulate emigration unduly, or that any Irishman should leave his country except at his own free will.

The debate was continued until ten o'clock, when leave was given to bring in the Bill.

Our correspondent at Cape Coast, under date of 21st ult., states that the King of Ashantee has totally denied that he was about to invade the Colony. He never had a thought of such a scheme, and asserts that it is pure invention due to the malice of his enemies. It is added that the Ashantis have evidently no intention of making war.

From Bombay our correspondent telegraphs that the Court Martial on Colonel Macdonald opened yesterday. Generals Nuttall and Burrows giving evidence against him.

The French Government have made overtures to the King of Tunis to co-operate with them in punishing the Kronmirs. The Chamber yesterday passed two Bills granting nearly six millions of francs to the Ministers of War and Marine to defray the cost of the expedition and the transport of troops. The force will consist of thirteen thousand men. The Franco-Tunisian question came up for discussion in the Italian Chamber yesterday, and Signor Zanardelli moved a Vote of Confidence in the Ministry, which was rejected by one hundred and ninety-two to one hundred and seventy-one. Upon the motion of Signor Cairoli, the House at once adjourned.

Lord Beaconsfield has partially recovered from the serious relapse he experienced early yesterday morning, and last night his physicians reported that his Lordship's weakness was now a chief source of their anxiety.

The Lord Mayor has opened at the Mansion House a subscription, towards which he has already received a considerable amount of money, in aid of the sufferers by the earthquake at Chios. Our Athens correspondent says it is feared the plague will break out on the island, owing to the large number of bodies which are in the ruins.

Three more arrests were made in Ireland yesterday. They are Richard and James Nally, sons of a farmer near Clontarf, and brothers of the Nally previously in Kilmainham. The third prisoner is John Hassan, who lived in the same locality.

The Pontefract Spring Handicap was won by Mr. H. Hall's Otello. At the Warwick Meeting Sir G. Chetwynd took the All-England Selling Plate with Masquerader, and the Stoneleigh Two-Year Old Plate with Comely. At the Eglinton Hunt Meeting Mr. O. J. Cunningham won the Scottish Grand National Steeple chase with Belman, and the Eglinton Park Hunt Steeple-chase Plate with Melbourne.

Judgment was pronounced yesterday by the Lord Chancellor, Earl Cairns, Lord Blackburn, and Lord Watson in the appeal of the Rev. A. H. Mackonochie to the House of Lords against the decision of the Court of Appeal, which, by a majority of three to two reserved the judgment of the Queen's Bench, granting a writ of prohibition in the proceedings for his suspension for disobedience of Lord Penzance's monition to discontinue Ritualistic practices. Their Lordships affirmed the judgment of the Appeal Court, and dismissed the appeal with costs. The effect of the judgment is that Mr. Mackonochie is suspended from his benefice for three years.

Mrs. Hart-Davies completed her evidence in chief yesterday, at the Central Criminal Court, in the charge against Mrs. Fletcher for fraud, by relating what took place in the U. States when she came to her common sense, and believing that the Fletcheres had robbed her, caused the prisoner to be apprehended. In cross-examination the Prosecution gave further curious particulars of her earlier relations with the prisoner and her husband.

The stock markets showed firmness at an improvement in the earlier hours, though the best points were not maintained. Consols for money and the account recovered 3/4 to 100 1/2, and 100 1/2 to 100 1/4 respectively. In Home Railways the upward movement was marked at the outset, but a partial relapse was experienced before the close. Great Eastern rose 1/2, North British 1/2, Midland, and Great Northern 1/2. Caledonians closed a trifle weaker. Among Foreign Government Securities, Egyptian Unified, Hungarian, Turkish, Greek, Spanish and Mexican were in request. On the other hand, a decline was noted in French, Italian and Peruvian. Gold to the value of £75,000 was sent into the Bank, and the proportion of Reserve to Liability in the Return was 45 1/2 per cent against 47 last week.

Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer.

The Genuine only in Pink Paper Wrappers.

It cannot fail to Restore Grey Hair to its youthful Colour, Gloss and Beauty.

IT IS NOT A DYE

It ever proves itself the natural strengthener of the Human Hair.

THERE are two special qualities which determine and fix the superiority and excellence of Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer:—First—its prompt quick action, and the new growth, life, and vigour that it gives to the hair, never falling by a few applications to Restore Grey or White Hair to its youthful Colour, imparting to the hair a delightful aroma, fresh, delicate, and unchangeable in
